Comments

He explains quite ok but I think the most effective way to teach game theory is to write examples on the white board not just explaining. He also doesn't provide model answers for problem set for tutor class (our tutor has to find the answer herself) and didn't clearly check the mistakes (a lot of them) in his handouts.

Several mistakes with respect to lecture slides, and less content for a 2-hour lecture.

A few typos, but otherwise the way the material was divided up made sense.

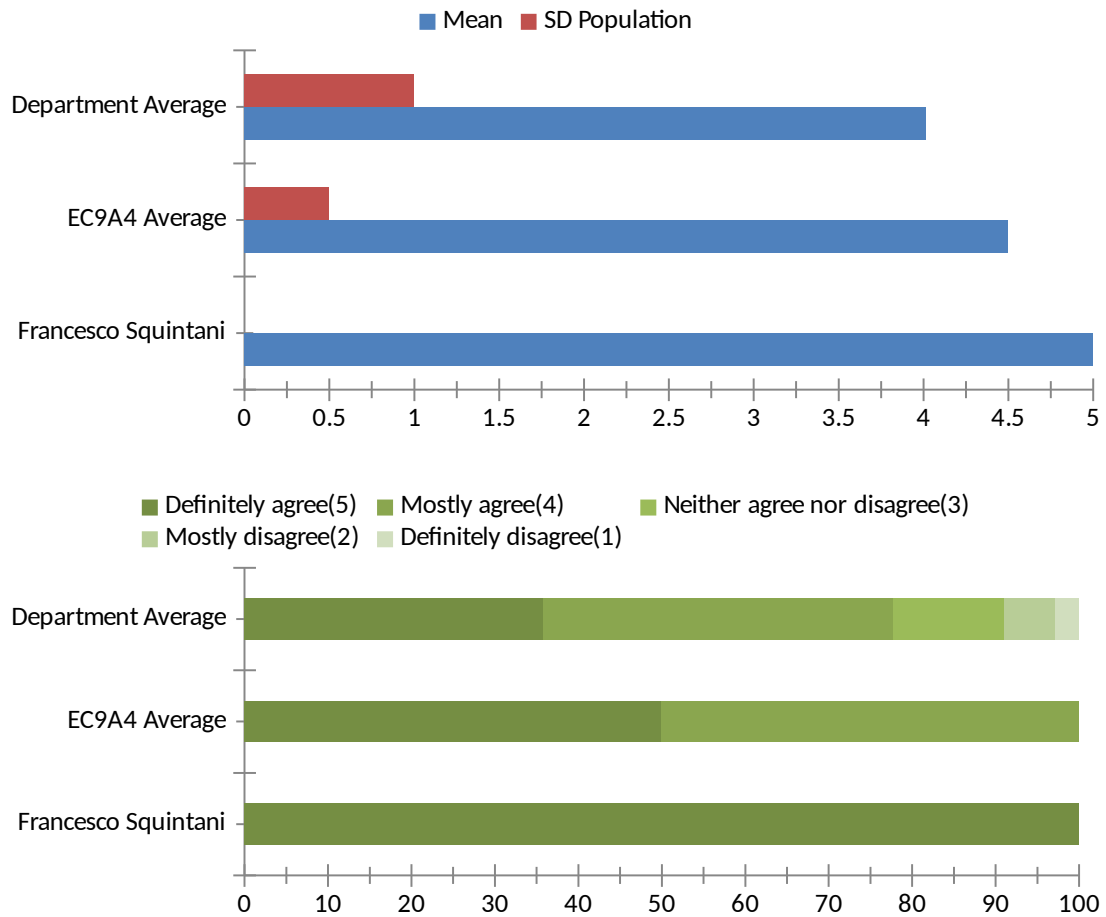

Too short because there isn't enough content to fill the course. Also too many typos disrupting the lectures.

Well, it's hard to tell whether it should be called effectively or the opposite. seems 2 hours is too much for each lecture..However, Mr. Squintani discussed with us about how to rearrange the schedule in the following teaching term.
