

How to look at art

A guide for all the family

1. Give each member of your family one of these roles:

Describer
Interpreter
Maker
Curator

*you might have to share roles or take two,
depending on the size of your family.*

2. The describer goes first. They describe EVERYTHING that they can see. Check that they don't miss anything.
3. The interpreter goes second. They tell the family all the things that the art work reminds them of and makes them think about.
4. The maker goes third. They tell the family how the artist went about making the work: what materials they used, where they started and where they ended.
5. The curator goes fourth. They look around the gallery and decide why this work was placed here. How does it connect to other works that are nearby?
