

Effective Partnerships:

The CAPITAL centre collaboration between the RSC and University of Warwick has inspired two key initiatives for the Education team at the RSC. An accredited training programme for RSC actors who want to learn more about how to work with young people and an accredited programme of continuing professional development for teachers. So what are we beginning to learn about the benefits that partnerships between cultural organisations, Higher Education institutions and schools can bring to each of the partners? How can higher education institutions and schools leverage the skills in the voluntary sector (in sciences just as much as the arts) to broaden the experiences of learners over the long term?