

Not very far Away Day

A chance for scholars interested in women and gender from across the University of Warwick to meet in an informal atmosphere and find out about each other's research

21st May, 10am – 1pm, Ramphal R0.12

Plus, come and meet the CSWG's new Honorary Professor, Cynthia Cockburn and discuss research collaborations.

Comments from attendees at previous NVFADs:

"Really enjoyed the day all round and the novel format made for an extremely engaging morning."

"The Posters were brilliant!"

"I got to talk to people who I hadn't met before and think about common themes and interests."

"I got to meet other people who are interested in my topic."

Present your research as a poster

Whether you're a faculty member or student, if you are doing research with women or gender as a theme we would like you to present your work in poster form to the NVFAD.

And, for those people who are unable to attend the NVFAD, making a poster is a way of still participating.

More information about the NVFAD and about how to make a poster is available at: www.go.warwick.ac.uk/NVFAD

Attendance at the NVFAD is free but you must book your place in advance by contacting Jane Cooper (email j.p.cooper@warwick.ac.uk or phone ext. 24771)
