The Developing World of the Child: A Pack of Resources

In association with the Department for Education and Skills, a Regional Making Research Count

DAY CONFERENCE

for practitioners and managers working in social, health and education settings

27 FEBRUARY 2007

9.30 am – 4.00 pm at The Alan Higgs Centre, Coventry

Key Speakers include

Authors of The Developing World of the child: Professor Jane Aldgate, Professor of Social Care, The Open University; Dr David Jones, Consultant Child Psychiatrist, Park Hospital for Children, Oxford; Wendy Rose, Senior Research Fellow, The Open University

And Dr Ashok Chand, University of Warwick

Following a morning focusing on the theories, frameworks and perspectives informing The Developing World of the Child and introducing the Pack, the afternoon will focus primarily on promoting the positive development of good practice and introduce tools and materials to assist practice for use by practitioners, trainers and managers.

This Pack of Resources was commissioned by the Department for Education and Skills to assist practitioners in health, education and social care to assess the developmental needs of children and young people and identify appropriate help. The Pack contains a book, a DVD, learning materials and a practice notebook produced by a multi-disciplinary team of professionals and academics under the directorship of The Open University. Informed by new perspectives on child development and featuring contributions from a wide range of disciplines, the Pack centres on the experiences of children and builds bridges between the understanding of child development and the tasks of practitioners working with children and families.

Attendance is FREE ... Places are limited to 100, including protected availability places for Making Research Count Warwick members. Early booking is recommended*
